"Our greatest glory is not in never falling, but in rising every time we fall." – Confucius

Martin graduated from the University of Lucerne with a Master of Law (MLaw) in 2024, with a strong academic focus on business law, particularly financial markets, tax and corporate law. During university, Martin gained valuable experience working for a family office, further deepening their practical understanding of legal and financial matters.

Upon graduating, Martin joined a Big Four firm, where they worked for nearly two years in corporate tax advisory, developing expertise in tax strategies and compliance for SMEs and international corporations. Driven by meticulous attention to detail and a problem-solving mindset, Martin has built a solid foundation in navigating complex corporate frameworks and business processes.

Prior to his studies, Martin worked at UBS for several years across different business divisions including the completion of his banking apprenticeship.

Outside of work, Martin is passionate about outdoor activities and enjoys playing golf, ice hockey or skiing. Whether on the slopes or on the course, Martin values time spent in nature to stay balanced and energised.
