Health law includes numerous interfaces with data protection law and is the area of application of numerous new technologies. Patrick Mettler is your competent partner in these three areas and in the corresponding interface problems.

Patrick Mettler's work focuses on life science and data protection law. In his specialist area, he focuses primarily on regulatory issues of health law and therapeutic products law, as well as data protection law issues – primarily in the area of the interface to health law. He also advises health professionals in employment law matters and deals with new technologies (such as artificial intelligence) and their potential and impact on the health care sector. Patrick Mettler regularly publishes and holds lectures in his specialist area.
